

Garry Golden
Lead Futurist, FutureThink

Garry Golden is an academically trained Futurist who speaks and consults on issues shaping society and business in the 21st century.

Garry has worked across a wide range of industry sectors and civic and cultural institutions including Kennedy Center, Association of American Museums, California Arts Presenters, INTIX (International Ticketing Association), King Abdulaziz center for World Culture, Denver Public Library, Theatre for Young Audiences and Woodruff Arts Center.

Art is his passion beyond futures studies. For the past decade he has collected new contemporary art supporting artists from street art, pop surrealism, to social realism. His slightly delusion 50 year project – inspired by the Vogel Collection – is to curate a great private collection on a non-hedge fund manager budget!

Garry holds a graduate degree in Future Studies from the University of Houston. He is a past Board member of the Association of Professional Futurists. Garry's upcoming book will about the future of the web and adaptive experience design.

Garry, his wife Ann and young sons Noah and Lucas live in an old, tilted wood framed row house in the South Slope area of Brooklyn, NY.
