Thriving Through Personal Leadership

Executive Directors at the helm of the smallest budget orchestras are uniquely challenged with small or sometimes no supporting staff. How can we approach individual leadership in a way that renews and refreshes us? John McCann will lead an interactive session that will focus on our roles within our institutions and share some practical tips and guidance on achieving an optimal balance to better serve our selves as well as our orchestras.

John McCann, president, Partners in Performance

Constituency Meeting 1b
4:20pm-5:15pm
Room 19

Introductions and First Responses

Meet your colleagues – old and new – and share your top questions you'd like to mull over during the week in Cleveland. Also, take 2 minutes to share a quick story from home, whether it's a success or an interesting challenge or question you'd like to raise. We'll follow these quick intros with some open discussion time to debrief the Opening Session.

Patron Engagement

All orchestras are interested in patron engagement, building and retaining audiences, but how do the smallest budget orchestras approach this differently? What works and what does not? What are some strategies that small orchestras can employ that will help attract ticket buyers and put them on the road to becoming donors?

Jill Robinson, president and CEO, TRG Arts
